The moment they are ready to pounce upon him, Maddou showers them with a load of incendiary bullets.

The battlefield between the Ailette and Aisne is a vast panorama of fire and the German resistance is most desperate. The issue on this sector has a graver strategic bearing than anywhere on the front. The allies threaten the enemy hold on Coucy le Chateau, which is highly important to the Germans as a distributing center for troops retreating from Noyon and those fighting stoutly on the left bank of the Ailette. The Americans are in the center still fighting to clear the ravines before them.

LONDON, Aug. 31.—Considerable lawlessness marked the first night London passed without police protection. During the earlier hours there were some harmless demonstrations, but later thieves became active. Daylight found a number of windows of jewelers' shops and other places broken. Considerable property was stolen. A few military police were about, including Americans, but they devoted their attention entirely to their own men. Even if they tried they wouldn't have been able to cope with the thieves, who generally operated in squads.

All societies are urged to be present at the front of the Butler theater at 12:30 p. m. A smoker will be held in the afternoon at the Airdome and a dance in the evening.
